

Huntley Film Archives Meets Queen Elizabeth

Huntley Film Archives was amazed and honored to receive the Queen last week as part of her Jubilee Tour.

They created a mini cinema for the screening and some of the best archive films were shown. As the meeting took place in Hereford, England, Huntley Film Archives chose to showcase films of British agricultural and rural life. The best received showed cider making and hop picking in the 1940's. All in a tiny ten seater cinema with DVD projection, which proved very interesting to Her Majesty. Amanda Huntley was introduced who, with Caroline Jenkins discussed matters of old film masters storage on which Queen Elizabeth proved very knowledgeable and she was concerned that the archive film assets of the country should continue.

Huntley Film Archives was delighted at the chance of this meeting and the opportunity it gave to highlight the work of film archives generally
